Collaborative Compositions

We are government contracting nerds with a passion for helping small businesses successfully navigate the complex federal procurement processes to develop steady traction and long-term growth in the government contracting sector. Whether you are looking for the right customers, the right contracting mechanism, new suppliers or more equitable partners, can help! We have the knowledge, connections, and resources you need to grow a successful and sustainable government contracting business.

Chelsea Meggitt, CEO of Collaborative Compositions, is a business strategist, author, and government contracting consultant with more than a decade in the industry who works with small and mid-size businesses to accelerate growth of their government contracting businesses. Having significant familiarity with the federal acquisition ecosystem including traditional FAR-based acquisitions and non-traditional ways of working with the government, Chelsea has a knack for identifying the path of least resistance to government contracting success, a skill that ultimately saves her clients time, effort, and money when trying to expand their federal sector footprint.

Chelsea puts her passion for small businesses to work by finding ways of cutting through red tape to make the government more accessible. She firmly believes small businesses are the backbone of our economy and that cumbersome bureaucracy should not stand in the way of small businesses providing critical products or services to our government.
